Did you know that nearly 1 in 3 of the more than 56 million Americans with disabilities lives in poverty? That's double the national poverty rate and among the highest of any underserved population in America.

Maximize your ability to serve persons with disabilities in your local community with a Train-the-Trainer session from the nationally-recognized experts at National Disability Institute, the first national non-profit dedicated exclusively to the economic empowerment and financial stability of all people with disabilities.

National Disability Institute experts will train you on NDI's exclusive Building Assets, Promoting Choice and Community Participation curriculum, with customized information for your community. You will learn about self determination, financial education, asset development strategies such as micro-enterprise, Individual Development Accounts (IDAs), home ownership, and public benefit programs that support asset development, including SSA work incentives, PASS and PESS.

Dynamic trainers with years of expertise in asset development for persons with disabilities will provide information, strategies and tools to incorporate asset development strategies into your existing programs and community-based learning activities.
