Developing School-Community Partnerships for Enhanced Transition Planning and Assessment

Supported by The HSC Foundation, The George Washington University and Kingsbury School developed a university-school partnership -Career Investigations for Transitioning Youth (CITY)- to develop a community-based transition program. This program demonstrated how partnerships between universities and high schools can result in rich and relevant transition preparation for students with disabilities.

Join us in a conversation to explore some strategies for developing school-community partnerships, while establishing opportunities for transitioning youth with disabilities.
